

I wanted to let you know that the House will vote tomorrow on repealing the health care law President Obama signed last year. The American people have repeatedly voiced their opposition to this law and the new majority in the House will allow these voices to be heard in our nation's capital. I will vote to repeal ObamaCare because I believe it is having a severe negative impact on job creation. Additionally, I believe it spends too much money while undermining Americans' access to affordable care and ability to keep the insurance they currently have. As the new Chairman of the Ways and Means Subcommittee on Health, I look forward to tomorrow's important vote and the opportunity to pursue that actually reduce health care costs. I will be sure to keep you posted on the outcome of tomorrow's vote and our ongoing efforts to bring about more responsible and more effective health reform.

better solutions